

#1

Reporting helps law enforcement investigations and better enables them to crack down on fraud.

#2

Reporting helps prevent other immigrants from being victimized.

#3

Reporting helps save money. Often, victims of immigration services end up paying multiple people with the hope that the next provider will actually get the job done.

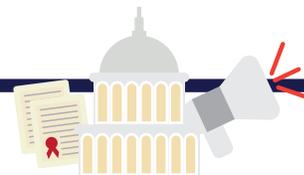

#4

Reporting can help prove liability for damages in civil proceedings. Victims may be allowed to sue the wrongdoers in civil court for money they lost as a result of the scam. In some cases, such reports may be used as evidence to prove liability.

#5

Reporting helps highlight the problem of immigration fraud nationally and locally and elevates the importance of fraud prevention to government decision-makers, enabling them to propose better laws and prevention programs.
