

Enhance Your Immigration Services With DOJ-Accredited Representatives

CLINIC

Why Add DOJ-Accredited Representatives to Your Team?

DOJ-accredited representatives offer a unique, cost-effective solution to strengthen and sustain immigration programs. Investing in hiring DOJ-accredited representatives will help your organization...

- Increase Organizational Impact and Value

Accredited representatives can provide a wide range of immigration legal services, from preparing cases to representing clients in certain proceedings, just as attorneys do. This capability empowers your agency to expand its reach and impact within immigrant communities, meeting the rising demand for affordable immigration services.

- Maximize Resources & Improve Retention

Hiring potential accredited representatives allows nonprofits to achieve similar outcomes as with attorneys, but with greater financial sustainability. Accredited representatives have shown higher retention rates in nonprofits compared to attorneys, helping your organization maintain program continuity. This reduces costs for your agencies, making it easier to manage program costs without sacrificing quality.

- Generate Revenue Through Low-Cost Services

Accredited representatives can handle affirmative immigration cases, providing services like adjustment of status, family-based petitions, and more. By offering these services, your organization can bring in fees that support your overall mission, helping to make your programs more financially sustainable.

- Build a Strong, Committed Team

DOJ-accredited representatives are often mission-driven and tend to stay longer in nonprofit settings, reducing turnover and the cost of repeated recruitment. Many of them are members of the immigrant community already, bringing with them language skills, biculturalism, and community relationships. They add value not only through their skills but also by their commitment to the organization's mission.

- Benefit From Ongoing CLINIC Support

As CLINIC Affiliates, your organization receives access to technical support, training, and resources from our knowledgeable staff. This support helps maintain the high standards required for DOJ Recognition and Accreditation, keeping your staff up-to-date with immigration law changes and best practices.

Ready to Strengthen Your Immigration Program?

Investing in DOJ-accredited representatives is a powerful way to serve your community, maximize resources, and build a sustainable program. Learn more about adding DOJ-accredited representatives to your team by visiting our website at cliniclegal.org.

Learn more at cliniclegal.org