This remedy is only available when a person is in immigration court proceedings before an immigration judge.

For further review by an immigration attorney/DOJ accredited representative gather the following documents and make an appointment with one of the providers on the attached referral sheet:

Immigration records, including any prior applications submitted to USCIS and/or documentation during entry to the US (If lacking these records, consider filing a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) Request)

Police reports, final court dispositions, traffic tickets from any previous encounters with police, law enforcement, or courts (If lacking these records, consider filing an FBI background check)

Identity documents (including but not limited to: birth certificates, marriage certificates, children's birth certificates, foreign national identification, passports, social security cards, ITIN# cards, etc.) Anything not in English must have a separate translation.

Our program is not representing you in seeking any immigration benefit. If you have been advised today (or in this legal screening) about your possible eligibility for an immigration remedy, we recommend that you contact one of the immigration attorneys or legal services providers in the attached referral sheet to make an appointment.
